Creating a sustainable café

The Sustainable Restaurant Association have launched a Café Programme which as outlined in the SRA Press release, calls for cafes to 'go beyond the beans', and demonstrate their efforts to operate as sustainable businesses. The programme provides cafés who join as members with a comprehensive assessment of the café's sustainability based on 14 areas grouped under three categories:

Environment:

Water Saving; Workplace Resources; Waste Management; Energy Efficiency; Supply Chain.

Society:

Community Engagement; Treating People Fairly; Healthy Eating; Responsible Marketing.

Sourcing:

Environmental Positive Farming; Local & Seasonal; Ethical Meat & Dairy; Fair Trade.

Depending on the scores in each of these categories, cafes will be given a score and a rating of one, two or three stars. There are whole host of ways in which cafes can make efforts to become more sustainable. The new rating system will allow cafes to demonstrate their efforts to be more sustainable beyond their sourcing of tea and coffee.

Café Bean has been making multiple efforts to be more sustainable by doing the following:

To-Go Coffee Cups:

The thermal cover is made of recycled content and the lid is 100% recyclable. It is working with manufacturers to try to create a cup that can be recycled anywhere in the world.

Machines:

Machines are turned off when not needed to reduce carbon emissions.

Recycling:

recycle as much as they can. Recycle coffee sacks into carpet underlay. Many stores recycle organics waste and coffee grounds to create renewable fuels.

Grounds for Grounds:

Customers can request used coffee grounds for free. Can be used in the garden as a natural plant fertiliser or to add to a compost pile.

Machines are turned off when not needed to reduce carbon emissions.

Recycling:

recycle as much as they can. Recycle coffee sacks into carpet underlay. Many stores recycle organics waste and coffee grounds to create renewable fuels.

Gounds for Grounds:

Customers can request used coffee grounds for free. Can be used in the garden as a natural plant fertiliser or to add to a compost pile.

Creating a Sustainable Café

The Sustainable Restaurant Association have launched a Café Programme which as outlined in the SRA Press release, calls for cafes to 'go beyond the beans', and demonstrate their efforts to operate as sustainable businesses. The programme provides cafes who join as members with a comprehensive assessment of the cafe's sustainability based on 14 areas grouped under three categories:

Environment:

Water Saving; Workplace Resources; Waste Management; Energy Efficiency; Supply Chain.

Society:

Community Engagement; Treating People Fairly; Healthy Eating; Responsible Marketing.

Sourcing:

Environmental Positive Farming; Local & Seasonal; Ethical Meat & Dairy; Fair Trade.

Depending on the scores in each of these categories, cafes will be given a score and a rating of one, two or three stars. There are whole host of ways in which cafes can make efforts to become more sustainable. The new rating system will allow cafes to demonstrate their efforts to be more sustainable beyond their sourcing of tea and coffee.

Café Bean has been making multiple efforts to be more sustainable by doing the following:

To-Go Coffee Cups:

The thermal cover is made of recycled content and the lid is 100% recyclable. It is working with manufacturers to try to create a cup that can be recycled anywhere in the world.

Machines:

Machines are turned off when not needed to reduce carbon emissions.

Recycling:

recycle as much as they can. Recycle coffee sacks into carpet underlay. Many stores recycle organics waste and coffee grounds to create renewable fuels.

Gounds for Grounds:

Customers can request used coffee grounds for free. Can be used in the garden as a natural plant fertiliser or to add to a compost pile.
